Topic Evaluation Checklist

Before finalizing your topic, ask:

- ☐ Can I identify 3-5 distinct categories?
- ☐ Do I have one clear classification principle?
- ☐ Are my categories specific enough?
- ☐ Can I provide examples for each category?
- ☐ Do the categories avoid significant overlap?
- ☐ Is this topic interesting to my audience?
- ☐ Do I know enough about this topic?
- ☐ Can I write 5-7 paragraphs about this?

If you answered NO to any: revise your topic or choose a different one.

Common Topic Mistakes to Avoid

☐ Too Broad: "Types of people" ✓ Specific: "Types of coffee shop customers based on ordering habits"

☐ Only 2 Categories: "Types of students: good and bad" ✓ 3-5 Categories: "Types of students: Procrastinators, Planners, and Crammers"

☐ No Clear Principle: "Types of drivers: fast, slow, angry, safe" ✓ Clear Principle:

"Types of drivers based on road behavior: Aggressive, Cautious, and Distracted"

☐ Too Technical: "Types of quantum physics theories" ✓ Accessible: "Types of science enthusiasts based on interest level"

Bonus: Combine Topics for Unique Ideas

Mix two elements for originality:

- Types of students + social media = Types of students based on Instagram posting habits
- Types of travelers + technology = Types of travelers based on photo-taking behavior
- Types of shoppers + environment = Types of eco-conscious consumers
