

500 Word Essay on Why I Want to be a Nurse Nursing has always been a calling for me, ever since I was a little girl. My own personal experiences with family nurses and doctors have left an impression on me that I never forgot. From the bedside manner of a nurse to the technical expertise of a doctor, I knew nursing was something I wanted to pursue as my life's career.

I have always been passionate about caring for others and helping those in need, and nursing would give me the opportunity to do just that. As a nurse, I would be able to learn about the human body and how it works, as well as the medical procedures used to help people heal. Additionally, nurses get to be part of the patient's journey as they heal and recover.

In my eyes, being a nurse is one of the most important jobs in our society. Nurses are often the first responders to medical emergencies and provide invaluable care during a person's recovery. Every day I wake up knowing that I am helping people, and that is an incredibly rewarding feeling.

I also believe that being a nurse would give me the opportunity to make a real difference in people's lives. Whether it is helping ease a patient's pain, providing emotional support during times of distress, or simply making sure a patient takes their medication on time, I know that I could use my nursing skills to help people in a very meaningful way.

Finally, I am drawn to the field of nursing because it is constantly growing and evolving. With new technology and treatments being developed each day, nurses need to be on top of the latest trends and developments in order to provide the best possible care. This challenge excites me because I know that I will never stop learning and growing as a nurse.

When all is said and done, there is no doubt in my mind that I want to be a nurse. It gives me the opportunity to help people when they need it most and make a real difference in their lives. Furthermore, nursing allows me to challenge myself each day through new developments in the field and stay ahead of the curve. Nursing is more than just a job for me, it's a passion. That is why I want to be a nurse.
